

INFUSE Boosts Veeam's Pipeline Performance During Buyer Model Shift

CASE STUDY

About Veeam Software

With over 550,000 customers, Veeam Software is a leading provider of data backup, recovery, and management solutions for virtual, physical, and multi-cloud environments.

Its flagship product, Veeam Backup & Replication, ensures fast and reliable backup and recovery, helping businesses enforce critical data protection and reduce downtime.

Veeam's solutions are user-friendly, scalable, and integrate easily with cloud platforms like AWS, Microsoft Azure, and Google Cloud, making Veeam a trusted choice for comprehensive data protection and disaster recovery.

In 2023, Veeam was ranked the top vendor in Gartner's Market Share Analysis for Enterprise Backup and Recovery Software worldwide.

The Objective

Veeam's APJ Demand Center was tasked with supporting the organization's Sales Development Representatives (SDRs) in identifying marketing signals from highly engaged prospects during their shift to a new buyer group approach. This is a common challenge, especially as buyer behavior evolves, resulting in greater caution and reluctance to complete forms or respond to calls.

To adapt to these shifting buyer preferences, the organization recognized the need to pivot from an individual prospect approach that focused on specific decision makers in isolation, to one that engaged entire buying groups at target large accounts. Under the new approach, only prospects that reached a certain engagement threshold would be considered highly engaged. Prospects would need to engage multiple times to be scored up.

Veeam turned to INFUSE for assistance in implementing this vision through a target account approach, based on a deep understanding of key personas to fuel the necessary targeting. Veeam shared their unique scoring model with INFUSE to identify the right intent signals and highly engaged prospects for their SDRs to focus on.

The Solution

To fulfill Veeam's objectives, INFUSE presented a proposal centered on nurturing buying group members at each stage of their journey. This solution emphasized adopting innovative strategies and a more client-centric approach to better align with the needs of target buyers.

The proposal suggested eliminating:

- Only promoting gated content
- Email blasts
- Phone calls after one touch
- MQLs

A multi-touch target account campaign was launched, powered by 6sense buyer intelligence (as part of the INFUSE and 6sense partnership) to ensure the prospects targeted met the client's exact requirements. The focus was placed on quality and not quantity.

309 high-quality prospects were identified from the following regions:

Out of the 309 leads generated, the targeted accounts were segmented as follows:

- 85% were considered highly engaged
- Only 15% were engaged leads with a lower lead score

The INFUSE Client Success team was on hand to overcome challenges—such as incorporating the unique scoring model, making critical adjustments, and providing alternative prospects to replace those flagged by Veeam SDRs.

“The buying committee and buying group scores were the crux of this whole new approach — taking a holistic view of the different personas and engaging them with the right messaging and content, tailored to their stage in the journey.”

The Results

By nurturing buying committee members with relevant, valuable content, INFUSE was able to boost the client's pipeline with highly-engaged, qualified prospects meeting their new enterprise criteria. As a result, the Veeam Demand Center team experienced a favorable Return on Ad Spend of $6 for every $1 spent in the first pilot program launched.

The focus on targeting high-quality prospects within the buying group yielded positive results early in the campaign. This quality-over-quantity approach yielded fewer respondents; however, the prospects that did engage quickly resulted in Veeam overachieving its pipeline goals.

The campaign resulted in:

- Significant conversion
- Increased average deal size
- Exceeding pipeline goal

In addition, Veeam saw an increase in high-quality buyer signals and an overall enhanced customer experience. The program was so successful that it was replicated in both the US and EMEA regions to continue driving Veeam's growth. After the pilot, the client continued to work with INFUSE for the subsequent quarter, each time trying out new ideas and approaches.

“What I'm most impressed with is that INFUSE is not like a vendor that provides us with cookie-cutter solutions. Our scoring model is different from what other clients will have. INFUSE worked with it to create a tailored program for us.”
